L.A. Women portrays a certain scene. During her six-month stay in Los Angeles Eva Schlegel photographed some 40 artists and architects, documenting their studios, collaborators, manuscripts, drawings, models and working processes. The resulting image presents a scene in which an entire generation of artists and architects “live and work“ in Los Angeles. A bio-bibliographical appendix will give insight into a dense personal network comprising universities, museums, offices, galleries, etc. which forms the backdrop of this center of artistic and creative productivity.
